When school lets out in early June, kids and parents alike welcome a break from the weekday schedule and grind of the academic year. Sleeping late, lounging on the sofa, and playing video games for hours on end seems like the perfect way to fill the next 12 weeks—at least to many young people. However, just a few days into the summer vacation, kids can be heard moaning, “I’m bored. There’s nothing to do.” And parents begin whispering to themselves, “When does school start?”

“To a certain extent kids do like to have a free, unstructured environment,” notes Ellen Peterson, a parent educator in Lamorinda, “but often they don’t know what to do with it.” While passive activities such as watching television and playing on the computer have their place, most young people prefer to be involved in an activity related to their interests during this unstructured time, Peterson explains.

To meet the demand for quality entertainment and enrichment for children during the summer months, a host of camp opportunities are available throughout Lamorinda from June through August. And summer camps—like the kids that attend them—come in a variety of shapes and sizes.

Specialty camps provide young people with the opportunity to develop a specific skill, concentrate on an academic area, or cultivate a new interest. Camp Galileo, Cal Shakes Theater Camp, and Sewnow Camps for Kids and Teens are examples of the unique camp alternatives available in Lamorinda this summer.

Camp Galileo, like the innovator for which it is eponymous, caters to kids interested in exploring art, science, and the outdoors. “What parents like about Camp Galileo is that our staff is comprised of enthusiastic and experienced educators who are able to provide a quality educational opportunity,” explains Jeremy Sampson, Galileo’s Marketing Manager. “For the kids, it’s a place where they get to participate in some neat art and science programming along with traditional camp activities like singing and outdoor play—they have fun.”

“Whether shy or outgoing, Cal Shakes theater camp is ideal for the young person who is new to performance but has an interest in theater,” notes Artistic Learning Administrator Samantha Fryer. The students enjoy participating in classes such as improvisation and stage combat while preparing for a performance on the last day. “The real take away is in the development of life skills such as listening and communicating,” says Fryer. “In addition, the campers learn how to function in a group of their peers while managing the stress of producing a performance.”

Susan Goldie, owner of Sewnow in Lafayette, has expanded her fashion design and sewing camp programs for Summer 2008 to accommodate demand after camp sessions sold out quickly last year. “Kids really love our camps, because they get to learn a great new lifelong skill, and they get to express their creativity…it’s refreshing to be able to create something that nobody else has that you designed yourself,” explains Goldie. “Parents like the camps because it’s a sneaky way to reinforce practical math skills for their kids and also to train them to do their own clothing alterations.”

No matter the child’s passion or the parents’ objectives, there’s a camp to fit in Lamorinda.
