Birds Stop for Man's Signs

Greg Moeller may call himself a "hobo," but he can't stand homeless birds. Moeller has made it his mission to insure that cavity nesting birds have a high class place to call home, especially around his Happy Valley neighborhood.

Moeller, a retired CPA and Lafayette's 2013 Citizen of the Year, first began repairing the backsides of stop signs about three years ago. After he cleaned and painted the gray, white or rusted backs while wearing "old, dirty clothes" (hence the "hobo" label), he hung a few birdhouses "to add beauty." Since then, he estimates he's decorated "50 to 75" sign backs with store bought or homemade bird houses, or put up "natural looking" decorations of quail, deer, owls, and squirrels.

The stop sign upgrades can be found sprinkled along Upper Happy Valley, Hidden Valley, Acalanes and Deer Hill roads. "I love it just painting [the signs]," Moeller said of the project he funds himself. "Everyone's been extremely positive."

He said some people have even asked for birdhouses in their neighborhoods. Parents tell him their children count the ones they see when driving in their cars. Moeller said he even spoke with Lafayette chief of police, Eric Christensen, about the project.

"He said as long as I'm not obstructing the sign [it was okay]," Moeller said. In the end, it seems even the birds - chickadees, tit mice, sparrows, swallows and wrens - obey the signs and stop along the route.

Greg Moeller attaches another home-made birdhouse to a waiting sign in Lafayette.
