"Meeting people is absolutely vital," LaFSD Superintendent Josephine O'Connor said. "It's definitely important when you're trying to be open about your role and what you're doing. It's reaching out to the community and hanging out with people. I'm trying to be really open and honest and learning." O'Connor said. "I'm really excited to know the families that call Lafayette home and also about facing and learning their concerns and aspirations.

She is proud of the district's education system and the direction it's taking, especially with the new superintendent bringing in a fresh perspective and new ideas.

"I think it's really important to keep the district moving forward and making improvements," O'Connor said. "I'm excited to see what we can accomplish together."
